OUR APPROACH

We are committed to acting ethically and with integrity in all our business dealings and relationships, and to implementing and enforcing effective systems and controls to ensure modern slavery is not taking place anywhere in our own business or in any of our supply chains. Our Anti-Slavery and Human Trafficking Policy, which is supported by related internal policies and processes, including but not limited to our Supplier Code of Conduct, reflects our zero-tolerance approach. All staff are encouraged to take responsibility for ensuring that there is no breach of our policies and to report any concerns.

RELATED HUMAN RIGHTS INITIATIVES

Pro bono service is a value that is shared across our firm, and our globally recognised program demonstrates our commitment to upholding and promoting human rights. We work closely with a number of human rights focused non-profits, charities and international NGOs, providing them with pro bono advice, assistance and representation, as well as assisting to draft amicus briefs, representing individuals who have experienced breaches of their human rights, undertaking comparative research projects to support advocacy work, and helping to collect evidence and document human rights violations to underpin justice and accountability efforts. For more information about our pro bono program, please see our website: <https://www.orrick.com/en/Community/Pro-Bono>.

OUR SUPPLY CHAIN

As a regulated professional services firm, we engage a range of suppliers to enable our lawyers to provide services to our clients and to support the running of the firm. Most of our suppliers comprise professional service providers, including legal counsel, banks, consultants and tax and accounting services. A relatively small proportion of our supply chain consists of those required to support our internal operations, including IT services, recruitment, travel and facilities management (e.g. maintenance, catering and cleaning services). We generally foster long-term relationships with our suppliers, which we believe involves less risk as we have greater knowledge of their operations and policies. On this basis, we have assessed our overall risk of exposure to modern slavery to be low.

SUPPLIER DUE DILIGENCE

Notwithstanding our low level of exposure to the risk of modern slavery, we remain vigilant to the risks and have developed a risk-based anti-slavery and human trafficking strategy, which is facilitated by a two-staged risk assessment process. First, we screen new and existing suppliers against high-level contextual risk factors including country risks factors, sector-specific risk factors and risk factors associated with particular supply chains. Secondly, where a supplier presents a higher risk for modern slavery, we will subject the supplier to a more in-depth analysis, and where appropriate, require the supplier to adhere to our Supplier Code of Conduct which sets out the ethical standards that must be adhered to in order to do business with us.

TRAINING

Individuals within the firm who maintain responsibilities for the procurement of goods and services receive training on the identification of modern slavery risks and contributing factors, in addition to guidance on the policies and procedures that we have in place.

REVIEW

We review our measures to address modern slavery risk each year. Further to a recent review, we have concluded that our existing measures remain proportionate and effective. However, we will continue to review our processes and assess the effectiveness of our approach to ensure that we maintain our high ethical standards.

LOOKING AHEAD

During the financial year for 2024/2025, we will continue to consider where our existing policies can be enhanced to underline our commitment to preventing modern slavery within our supply chains. This will include ensuring that further teams within the Orrick network receive appropriate training, to enable them to engage with relevant service providers to address risk, as appropriate.
